I would love to add it to my collection. I usually collect Amazon games and books, so anything in that is a plus. I always come back to this game. I have every update. I am looking to trade. I can change the offer if you have something you want traded."We're not supposed to get pets from that shelter," Sasha recalls. "But I'm so sad and lonely and neglected, I would do anything. That's when I found this little homeless boy. I just knew that he needed a mom." They tried to find another family for the youngster, but no one was interested. She took him to the same shelter in which she had been given up by her birth mother. "The people there say, 'We'd love to adopt, but he's too old and fat and smells bad,'" Sasha said. She tried to explain that, despite the boy's poor health, the perfect pet for her would be a small kitten. "They said, 'No way. Kittens need to be weaned, and that will take a year or longer. But you can adopt him when he's older,'" she recalled. Porch cat Sasha adopts boy Sasha promised them she'd be patient. "I think they just forgot about us," she said. "But I was determined to get this little guy." With Sasha's help, a worker found a shelter kitten for her. Sasha says she remembers feeling excited and afraid at the same time. She was afraid that the kitten would be passed on to the right family, but she also felt excitement knowing that she had the chance to make a happy home for him. "It was so hard finding the perfect family for him," she said. "I wanted him to be in a home with a mom, and if there was a cat, we had to get him one that wouldn't be jealous." More than a year later, Sasha is still a single mom to her adopted kitten. "I guess in the end,
